

As an Amateur Radio Operator, I strongly oppose Broadband Over Power Lines. The interference it will cause far out weighs the advantages. There are numerous options for broadband now; the power grid doesn't need to be one of them. The power grid was made to deliver power not Internet. We are all lucky the FCC isn't in the public utility business. They would probably try to run sewage through our waterlines and then tell us the smell really isn't that bad. Either way we it looks like we are left with a bad taste in our mouths.
